HOW I GOT THE GOAT

My daddy was the foreman of a big farm in East Texas near Ola, in Kaufman County. It was 6000 acres, but we still called it a farm. (Nowadays it can be a quarter acre and they'll try to call it a ranch.) Daddy would take the whole family to a small rodeo in North Texas near the town of Coppell. It was called the Cypress Waters Rodeo, legend has it was named after an old Wichita Indian village nearby called Sipres Mar. Daddy would set up a booth selling last minute insurance policies to the bronc and bull riders in the rodeo. You couldn't hardly sell insurance to a barrel rider and the clowns already had it. Mama would bring dough-bait and fish for carp in North Lake and Nana, my grandmother, would pick up a gig or two dancing at Pappy Dolson's "Diamond Doll" on Fitzhugh Avenue in Dallas. That left me with a lot of free time to become the 'agent provocateur' of the livestock pens. To pick up some extra clams I would pitch nickels with the truant kids from the town of Coppell, but I truly made good money fixing the goat roping competition which they ran at half time. I would first hustle a Busch Bavarian beer from Nana's cooler. Then I'd circle to the goat pen and pick out a big blue Billy goat to nurse that warm beer, like it was milk, through a rubber calf nipple. Then I'd run around to the front and take bets from the other kids on which goat would get roped first. The gun would fire, the gate would fly open, and sure as hell my drunk blue Billy-goat could barely stagger out from in front of the herd of young'uns slinging their lassos and yelling like a house a-fire. I could quite honestly clear $25 a day hoodwinking those little 4Hers. They never figured out how that skinny kid from Ola could pick the slowest rodeo goat every time. That blue goat is over the bar. He had a heart attack and Daddy stuffed him. .
